If you're experiencing domestic violence, you're not alone. We see many patients in this situation. This is a safe place to talk about your experience. We care about your wellbeing and we want to help.

If you talk to us about domestic violence, you can expect:

1

To Receive Support: Thank you for trusting us enough to share your experience. We're sorry this happened to you. No one deserves to be treated this way.

What We Won't Do: Judge you. Domestic violence is complicated and can happen to anyone. It takes courage and strength to tell someone.

2

To Receive Help: We'll give you information about services that are available in our community and help you figure out which ones are best at this time. We'll also ask you questions about your safety. If you don't feel safe to go home, we'll help you find somewhere to stay.

What We Won't Do: Force you to leave your partner or do anything that makes you uncomfortable. You are in charge.

3

Confidentiality: We won't tell anyone what you tell us, unless required by law. If you have questions, please ask and we'll give you more information. It's your choice what information to share.
